Meet the Maker

Jenny Deans is an award winning Jeweller who works from her studio at Coburg House Art Studios in Edinburgh. Her work is inspired by her love of nature and architecture, using silver and gold wire to create small scale pieces of sculpture to adorn the body.

Jenny graduated from Edinburgh College of Art in 2002 with 1st Class Honours, and alongside her personal practice has been teaching jewellery workshops ever since, both at the art college for the University of Edinburgh, Leith School of Art and at Coburg House. Her teaching includes Summer Schools, Evening Classes, Weekend Workshops and Private Tuition covering a wide range of jewellery making techniques. Jenny has also led Corporate Workshops and Meet the Maker events at the Museum of Scotland and Gleneagles, as well as a variety of client venues.

Jenny has taught students at all abilities and experience, ranging from complete beginners to students at degree level. Her friendly and relaxed approach to teaching engages students and enables them to produce their best work irrespective of their previous jewellery making experience.

Meet the Maker

Have you ever wondered what goes into being a jewellery designer/ maker? Jenny will bring along some of the tools of her trade, inspiration boards, samples and finished pieces, and discuss with your clients how she designs and makes her beautiful sculptural pieces. Guests will be able to talk to Jenny and handle the samples and finished pieces, as well getting hands-on and having a go at hammering some wire to see if they would have the hand-eye coordination that is required for this precise career.

Testimonial—“We were looking for an activity for our international corporate group to take part in during their Familiarisation Trip to Glasgow. Jenny’s Meet the Maker and Incorporating Pearls jewellery class was the perfect fit for our group of 10 people. Our guests loved hearing about her journey, her inspiration and how the jewellery is made. To then be able to actually choose a piece and have a hand in creating it, was a truly unique experience and a wonderful souvenir of their time in Scotland. And there was something for everyone with necklaces, earrings and cufflinks ensuring that all those on the trip left with their own special creation” Leanne Scobie, Director of Sales, Grand Central Hotel

Away Day Experience

Join Jenny in her specialist jewellery workshop in Edinburgh where she will teach up to 5 guests how to make a piece of jewellery. These experiences can be personalised for each group, choosing from a variety of techniques to produce their very own piece of jewellery, for example rings, bracelets, pendants, earrings and cufflinks. Guests will have the opportunity to create their piece from start to finish, using techniques including saw-piercing, filing, soldering and shaping. Jenny will be there to guide, assist and advise throughout the workshop to ensure guests leave with a personally created piece of jewellery and a memorable experience.

Corporate Workshops

Incorporating Pearls

This workshop is a fun introduction to jewellery making where guests will be invited to add pearls into some of Jenny's Canty range. Stud or drop earrings, pendants and cufflinks can all be enhanced by the guest; choosing from cream, grey or pink pearls they will be taught how to add these personal touches to their own gift to be taken away with them on the day.

Textured Jewellery

Jenny will demonstrate how to texture the metal using a range of different hammers, and guests will then choose the style they like and apply the texture themselves onto their chosen piece of jewellery. This workshop can work for larger groups of guests as it is an ideal ice breaker with limited time required to achieve lovely results. Earrings, pendants, rings, bracelets, cufflinks and key fobs can all be made using this technique. Guests can work in either silver or a base metal like copper and brass depending on the clients budget.
